ED. MATTAS DROWNED AT FRANKFORT

LOST HIS BALANCE AND FELL INTO RIVER FROM BOARD WALK.

Shortly before 8 o'clock last night Edward Mattas was drowned at Frankfort, Wash., under distressing circumstances. In company with Harry Johnson and John Shields, two old friends of the deceased, he left Astoria in a gasoline boat for Frankfort and reaching that point disembarked at the dock. As the party was passing along the walk leading from the dock to the shore, he lost his balance and fell into the river on the side on which there was no railing. His friend Shields who was walking beside him attempted to seize him as he toppled over but could not reach him in time. Where he fell the water was about four feet deep but the tide was running out strongly and the body was carried about 100 yards further down the river where it was recovered two hours later. Four boats were engaged in the work of rescuing the body which was finally caught by the grappling irons as above.

When the body was taken from the water all known means of resuscitation were employed but they were of no avail and the sorrowing friends were reluctantly forced to submit. The body was placed in a skiff which was secured to the dock and this morning the coroner at South Bend was notified. Leaving the body in charge of Fred Hansen, awaiting the coroner, Shields came to Astoria to make arrangements for the burial of his friend, and returned to Frankfort last night.

Mattas was born in Warsaw, Finland, and was 40 years of age. He was well known in this section and was a member of the Alaska Fisherman's Union, which organization will take charge of the remains and the arrangements for the interment.

From the fact that Mattas was unable to help himself in the comparatively shallow water it is thought that in falling he may have struck his head against the walk rendering him unconscious.

MACARONI IN ITALY.

To the Working People This Food is a Luxury.

Every one pictures the Italian as eating macaroni. What if I tell you that the Italians, taking them as a people, do not eat macaroni, and yet this is virtually true. Macaroni in Italy costs 4 to 8 cents a pound, and it is so costly for common use. It is about as accurate to say that the Italian lives on macaroni as that the Americans live on turkey. Macaroni to the working Italian is a luxury. You often see young fellows on a holiday indulging in a dish in a restaurant or before a street cook stand about as Americans would eat ice cream. A customary workman's dinner is a hunk of bread broken apart and "battered" with a few traces of tomato sauce. As for meat, it is the greatest rarity, and the only drink they can afford is water, which has the advantage of being cheap and filling. The Italians at home are not only temperate, but abstemious. Wine and beer and even tea, coffee and chocolate are forbidden to them on account of the expense. In all Italy we saw no one under the influence of liquor. So also there is practically no smoking. The government has a monopoly of the tobacco business, buys its supplies in quantities direct in America and elsewhere and charges three prices for everything. The few tobacco shops keep a place of smoking toward the back of the shop, so that passers and passers may light their pipes by it.—Los Angeles Times.

Lighting the Nest.

There dwells in upper Burma a bird with the high sounding name of New-courts-baza, but which is really a sort of blackbird. It is conspicuously clever, at least in one curious particular. For it actually lights up its nest artificially. To do this it works up a lot of clay into balls and sticks these balls all over with living fireflies in such a way that, although the fireflies are held captive, they shine all the same. The New-courts-baza then decorates its nest with half a dozen or so of these balls by hanging them round. The balls last for only a few days and are then replaced by others, and so on all through the nesting season.
